PETER SCHEMM PICTURE SALE.

The four evenings' sale at auction last week of the pictures, oils and watercolors owned by the estate of Peter A. Schemm, of Philadelphia, resulted in a total of $185,305, which includes a loss of $75 on a Verboeckhoven, sold on Thursday evening for $925, and returned, and which brought only $850 Friday evening.

The sale was on the whole the best and only even fairly successful one of pictures this season. This was due to the fact that many of the examples were of salable quality and averaged well in merit.

At the fourth and final sale, March 18, occurred the dramatic incident discussed elsewhere regarding the two Innesses withdrawn from the sale, and the auctioneer's equally theatrical relating of his having been a spectator of the raising of the flag on Independence Hall, Philadelphia, July 4, 1861, by Abraham Lincoln. This apropos of the sale of a portrait of Lincoln from life by the aged artist, S. J. Conant, which was purchased by Mr. Thomas B. Clarke for $3,700. The total of this final sale was $102,800, a good one under the present business conditions. The highest figure was $8,200, paid for a good Schreyer, "Wallachian Teamster Entangled in the Marshes," by W. Sharpe Kilmer, which probably cost Mr. Schemm about $5,000. There were many surprises. Willem Maris' "Dutch Landscape," appraised at $1,600, brought $3,200 from Knoedler & Co. Mr. A. A. Healy paid $3,500 for Israels' "Mother and Son," and M. W. L. Austin $5,600 for Rico's "Santa Maria della Salute," sold in 1902 in Felix Guard sale for $3,500, a high price even for this most important example. To the dealer McDonald went a Bruce Crane for only $175, and Mr. Fuller secured for $2,700 a Jacque that is said to have cost Mr. Schemm $10,000. For Ziem's "Fete Day—Venice," for which Mr. James Elverson, Jr., paid $3,900, Mr. Schemm is said to have paid $4,000 to Knoedler & Co. in 1901.

The titles of pictures sold, artists, buyers' names when obtainable, and price, follow:

First Session.

The 88 water colors sold on Mar. 14, brought $10,326. The majority brought very low prices. Limited space prevents publishing same in detail.

William Maris and Josef Israëls are as popular as ever. "The Drinking Pool," by Maris went to N. A. Croven for $1,200. "Amusing the Baby," by Israëls, was knocked down to Knoedler & Co. for $1,300. A Blommers went to G. Fliermans for $175 and his contemporary Kever's "Saying Grace," sold to J. Wittman for $115. Mr. Fliermans also purchased Albert Neuhuys's "Contented." George Poggenbeck's "Dutch Pasture and Cattle," went to Knoedler & Co. for $410. A. J. Groenwegen was represented by six paintings, of which his "Landscape with Cattle" got the best price, going to W. H. Johnson for $135. Weissenbruch's "Unloading the Fishing Boats," went to Mr. Fliermans for $850. "Feeding the Pigs," by Mari Ten Kate went to A. H. Cosden for $220. Tony Offermans's "Cobler," went to C. H. ## SCHEMM WATER COLORS SOLD.

Sun 3-15-14.
The 88 Pictures Go Under the Hammer for a Total of $10,325.

The eighty-eight water colors that had been collected by the late Peter A. Schemm of Philadelphia went under the hammer at the American Art Galleries last night and when Auctioneer Thomas E. Kirby had called his last "gone" $10,325 had passed hands for the pictures.

William Maris, the Dutchman, and Josef Israels are as popular as ever if last night's sale is any indication. A water color of Maris's, called "The Drinking Pool," which showed cattle drinking at a pool, went to N. A. Croven for $1,200, and an interior which depicted an old man cackling at a robust grandson and which Israels called "Amusing the Baby" was knocked down to Knoedler & Co., the art dealers, for $1,300.

Bernadus Johannes Blommers was represented by an interior in grays and greens which went to G. Fliermans for $175 and his contemporary Kever's "Saying Grace" sold to J. Wittman for $115. Mr. Fliermans also purchased Albert Neuhuys's "Contented."

George Poggenbeck's "Dutch Pasture and Cattle" went to Knoedler & Co. for $410. Adrianus Johannes Groenewegen was represented by six paintings, of which his "Landscape with Cattle" got the best price, going to W. H. Johnson for $135.

Weissenbruch's "Unloading the Fishing Boats" went to Mr. Fleimans for $850 and Mari Ten Kate, who had sold Mr. Schemm several watercolors, had a picture called "Feeding the Pigs" which A. H. Cosden gave $220 for. Tony Offermans's "Cobbler" went to C. H. Ulmann for $205. Some other prices and buyers were:

Kever's "Happy Home," $250, to George Millick; Le Comte's "Scene in a Dutch Town," $100, to Mr. Ulmann; Offermans's "Outside the Cottage Door," $105, to R. A. Rogers; F. J. Veiland's "Preparing Breakfast," to A. H. Cosden for $105; J. Senet's "Venice," to Henry J. Keil for $115; De Boek's "Edge of the Wood," to A. J. Cameron for $105; Leonard Ochtmann's "Dutch Scene," to Mrs. Frederick F. Thompson for $75, and Mesdag's "Fishing Boats," to P. J. Cameron for $125. The sale of the oil paintings of the Schemm collection begins to-night at Mendelssohn Hall.

SCHEMM SALE $36,200 SO FAR.

Ex-Senator Clark Gets Janess's "Late Afternoon" for $2,650. Sun 3-15-14.

The first section of the oil paintings in the collection of the late Peter A. Schemm of Philadelphia made up the offerings of the second session of the Schemm auction at Mendelssohn Hall last evening, following the sale of Mr. Schemm's water color drawings at the American Art Galleries on Tuesday evening.

Seventy-four paintings sold for $25,875, which, with the water color sale amounting to $10,325, makes the total of the auction to date $36,200. The more interesting pictures come up this and to-morrow evenings.

The paintings were apparently pretty well distributed by the sale, for while some of the New York dealers and private buyers were in the announced list of purchasers there were many more names unfamiliar at New York auctions, some of them belonging to Philadelphia.

Elmer Schofield's painting (161) "Winter Landscape" fell at $150 to J. E. D. Trask of the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts, and many have been bought for that institution. A. A. Healy of Brooklyn, who sometimes buys for the Brooklyn Institute as well as for himself, got Charles Gruppe's "Farmyard in Holland" (181) for $105. Former Senator W. A. Clark paid the highest figure of the evening, $2,650 for George Inness's "Late Afternoon" (127).

THE SCHEMM SALE.

Top Price of the Evening $7,000 for Schreyer's "Reconnoitre." Sun 3-15-14.

Prices moved up at the Schemm picture auction last evening in Mendelssohn Hall although most of the pictures went at low figures. The seventy-four canvases sold brought $46,290, which brings the receipts to date up to $82,490, with what are regarded as the most attractive or valuable paintings held until the final session of the sale this evening. Number 204 and 214 of last night's list, catalogued respectively as "Approaching Storm," by George Inness and "Showery Weather," by George Inness, were announced as "passed," without explanation. When the second one was passed without word of any kind the audience began a buzz of half-suppressed conversation, but Mr. Kirby went on to the next picture. There is a good deal of interest in Innesses these days.

Schreyer brought the high price last evening, Martin Beck paying $7,000 for his "The Reconnoitre." Senator W. A. Clark bought J. Francis Murphy's "On the Lowlands" for $1,425 and Cazin's "A Normandy Village" for $2,800. ## TWO INNESSES CALLED BOGUS

Sun 3-15-14.
UNUSUAL INCIDENT AT LAST NIGHT OF SCHEMM SALE.

Painter's Son Ruled Against Them and Kirby Asked That They Be Destroyed—Sharp Bidding for Conant Portrait of Lincoln—Some Good Prices.

Last night's sale of pictures at Mendelssohn Hall developed a very unusual experience for the large audience. They heard the auctioneer, Thomas E. Kirby of the American Art Association, declare that two paintings in the collection of the late Peter A. Schemm of Philadelphia which had been catalogued as by the late George Inness had been withdrawn from the sale as not being the work of Mr. Inness.

This in itself has scarcely ever happened before at a New York picture auction, but Mr. Kirby went further and indicated that the paintings will in all probability be destroyed. The two pictures were those referred to in THE SUN of yesterday morning as having been passed in Thursday's auction without explanation, Nos. 204 and 214 of the catalogue.

After No. 203 of the catalogue, "Gathering Clouds," by Mr. Inness, had been sold last evening for $2,500 Mr. Kirby made this statement:

"The two paintings, Nos. 204 and 214, which were withdrawn last evening were exhibited in our galleries during the opening day and press view of the exhibition and they were favorably commented upon by those who viewed them. Toward the evening of the opening day Mr. George Inness, Jr., who was visiting the exhibition, informed me of his doubts as to these two paintings being by his father. Accepting Mr. Inness's opinion, I immediately withdrew the paintings from the exhibition and ultimately from the sale. And in furtherance of our efforts to prevent the pictures passing into the hands of other parties I have suggested to the executors of Mr. Schemm that they obtain the consent of his heirs to destroy the two canvases."

These two paintings had not only been favorably noticed by newspaper critics on the day after their exhibition in the Schemm collection, but they had been shown in many other exhibitions to which Mr. Schemm had lent them and so far as is known their authenticity has never before been questioned.

Another interesting development of the evening was in the number of people who made efforts to get the portrait of Abraham Lincoln by A. J. Conant. Mr. Kirby made a little announcement in connection with this painting. He said that Mr. Conant had visited the galleries and had told him about the painting of the portrait in 1860, between Lincoln's nomination and his election. Mr. Conant, he said, had told him how good a likeness Mrs. Lincoln had pronounced it. Mr. Kirby then afforded his audience some amusement by making a personal confession.

"I told Mr. Conant," he said, "that I too could vouch for the portrait being a good likeness of Lincoln. I told him that on July 4, 1861, I had seen Lincoln in Philadelphia and that I was perfectly sure that this likeness of him was a true one."

Last evening's session which was the concluding one of the Schemm sale, yielded $102,800, which brings the total of the auction to $185,215.

The Lincoln portrait brought $3,700. It was bought by a widely known collector and is likely eventually to find a home in a public gallery. The highest figure of the evening was paid by W. Sharpe Kilmer of Rochester for Schreyer's painting entitled "A Wallachian Teamster Entangled in the Marshes," which was knocked down at $8,200.

Boldini's painting of "La Place Clichy," which had attracted a great deal of attention among painters, was bought by the Georges Petit Galleries of Paris for $2,450. A landscape by J. Francis Murphy of this city, "Indian Summer," sold at $1,325. The painting by Verboeckhoven, No. 225 of the catalogue, which on Thursday evening had sold for $925, was resold for the account of Thursday's purchaser, who had found the canvas too large for him, and brought $850.

7. Upon failure to comply with the above conditions, the money deposited in part payment shall be forfeited; all Lots uncleared within one day from conclusion of Sale (unless otherwise specified as above) shall be re-sold by public or private sale, without further notice, and the deficiency (if any) attending such re-sale shall be made good by the defaulter at this Sale, together with all charges attending the same. This Condition is without prejudice to the right of the Auctioneer to enforce the contract made at this Sale, without such re-sale, if he thinks fit.

8. The Undersigned are in no manner connected with the business of the cartage or packing and shipping of purchases, and although they will afford to purchasers every facility for employing careful carriers and packers, they will not hold themselves responsible for the acts and charges of the parties engaged for such services.

THE foreground of smooth meadow, sprinkled with yellow flowers and showing a stick of timber lying at the left, is enveloped in shadow. But behind a group of trees at the right of the middle distance a rosy glow strikes across the scene, flinging a spot of white on a farther tree, burnishing another at the left to golden-red and kindling into radiance the white walls of some cottages that dot the horizon. No. 269— PORTRAIT OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN

Height, 30 inches; width, 25 inches

IN an oval canvas with an olive-green background the bust is shown full to the front, while the head is turned a quarter to the left. The very dark brown hair is brushed in a roll above the forehead and spread loosely over the ear. The eyebrows are dark brown, the eyes blue, and the mouth, set firmly with the suspicion of a smile, displays the lower lip full and slightly out-turned. Beneath the black Prince Albert coat is a black satin vest, cut in a low V, which discloses a shirt-front with three tucks. A black satin bow-tie fills the wide opening of the turned-down collar; under which the ends of the bow are tucked.

A manuscript at the back of the canvas reads as follows:

"Believing that this sketch of Mr. Lincoln will possess in coming time some historic value, I make the following statement. It was painted by myself, from life, at Springfield, Ill., in the summer of 1860, between the time of his nomination and election for the presidency. It is the only attempt that I know of to give Mr. Lincoln's social, genial expression. The testimony of Mrs. Lincoln to its truthfulness was: 'That is excellent;' the best that has been taken. He looks there as he does when his friends are about him.' His intimate friends, Mr. Dubois and Mr. Hatch, made similar statements.

I have retained it until now in the vain hope that the citizens of St. Louis would honor me with a commission for a full length, historic picture in which Mr. Lincoln's pre-eminently social and genial nature should be represented. And it is with much reluctance, and sorrow even, that I am now compelled to part with it, which is mitigated only by the fact that it passes into the hands of my most esteemed and valued friend, Col. James Eads.

THE FAMILY MEAL

Height, 36 inches; length, 43 $\frac{3}{4}$  inches

Arthur Tooth & Sons

THE table is set in front of the window, the far side being occupied by a boy whose head and shoulders appear through the steam of a dish of potatoes. The mother, seated at the right, leans forward to help them, while a little girl, standing on a low armchair with her back to us, waits her turn. Meanwhile, the father rests his arm on the left end of the table and holds his right hand toward the baby who is placed beside him in a red baby-chair.

W. J. Kilmer

THE desert spreads before us, plane after plane of sandy hills, clothed sparsely with yellow vegetation, here in light and there in violet shadow. In the middle distance a small herd of antelopes are fleeing along a sort of gully, racing for their lives. For on the edge of a platform at the right of the foreground a lion is in full pursuit. His tail is raised stiffly, the hind legs drawn up under the belly, the right foreleg brought back, and the other extended forward in his stride.

THE VEIL

M. C. Anderson

A young woman is seated at the left of a marble sedilia, a bunch of violets by her side. She is clad in a white chiton, the loose folds of which overhang the girdle. It is clasped upon the shoulders, leaving the arms bare. Her black wavy hair, which descends over her left shoulder, is covered by a white veil, which she is drawing open with both hands, one end of it lying across her lap, the other floating down her right side.

THE scene represents the patio of a Spanish inn, enlivened with a group of guests, clad in gay rococo costumes. While the host busies himself with his duties, the maidservant, with a pitcher in her hand, has stopped to listen to a singer who is accompanying his voice on a lute. Seated outside an arbor that is sheltered by a tiled roof, partly overgrown with grapevine, he is handsomely attired in a plum-red suit, the sleeves of which are rosy-saffron, while large greenish bowknots are fastened below the knees.

Height, 32½ inches; length, 47½ inches

Crossing the centre of the foreground of deep blue water is a gondola, propelled by two oarsmen and brilliant with the scarlet, blue and white of the costumes of the passengers. Back of it a vessel with two square rigged masts and one schooner rig with auxiliary smokestack is gay with the flutter of bunting. Farther back on the right, glowing with luminous color, appear the façades of the Doge's Palace, the domes of St. Mark and the Campanile.

WATCHING AND WAITING

Height, 37 $\frac{3}{4}$  inches; length, 52 $\frac{3}{4}$  inches

On a grassy elevation overlooking the sea a young Dutch girl, while she knits, is watching two fishing boats that seem to be putting into shore. Her figure, seen in profile, is dressed in a loose waist of creamy, pinkish, lavender hue, a dull red skirt and blackish apron. Her face is ruddy and the brown hair shows from under a white cap which receives an accent of light. Her ball of wool has fallen on to the grass beside her. The sea is a faint olive gray-blue, with cream on the crests of the gentle rollers, while the sky is pale blue, sifted over with milky drab.

SPANISH FISHERMEN

Height, 40½ inches; length, 50 inches Mr. Melchers

THE deep blue water is dyed with flots of color reflected from a gondola, which the gondolier, leaning his weight on the oar, is bringing alongside another in the rear. In each is a boatman playing an accordion; and the two, as they raise their instruments, seem to be challenging each other to a rivalry of music. The boats have other gaily dressed occupants. At the back of them is a mass of shipping, with buff and creamy sails spotting the solid blue of the sky.

No. 296--- THE VALLEY OF THE DURDENT

Height,  $44\frac{3}{4}$  inches; length,  $57\frac{3}{4}$  inches

OVER the right of the background hill the sky hangs, an almost solid mass of slaty-purple drab, which breaks into white over the left horizon. It is a stormy day and the cool sunshine streaks the pasture fitfully, the foreground being in shadow. In the front plane at the left approaches a milkmaid with two zinc pails, attached to a sling around her neck and kept apart by a frame of bound sticks. She wears a crimson rose kerchief on her head, a black bodice over a white chemisette and a blue apron, tucked up above a brown skirt. At the right a white and dun red cow stands beside another, similarly marked, which is lying down, while in the rear appears a man, running alongside a dark brown cow.

THE farmyard, strewn with straw, is bordered at the back and right with brown roofs and silvery-drab walls; a conspicuous feature being a high gable in the rear, the side of which catches a strong light. A loaded wagon with a man on the top stands beneath it. At the left of the foreground a flock of sheep, followed by the shepherd, is coming around the angle of a wall which seems to enclose a drinking pool. The two foremost sheep are warily nosing their way up a small incline where two cocks are regarding each other threateningly. At the right of the foreground a man in gray-blue blouse is bending over a plow, while the team, a handsome white, reflecting the evening glow, and a bay, looking over his back, rest alongside. Each of them has a violet-blue sheepskin over his collar.

ONE of the wheels has sunk into the soft earth, causing the wagon to careen over to the left. The two pole-horses, a white and a chestnut, have been brought to a violent standstill, and with their heads thrown together, strain back on the harness. The shock, however, seems to have unhitched the four leaders, which are still plunging forward at a gallop, a bar attached to the slack traces showing on the ground beneath the white horse that is the nearest of the four to the spectator. Meanwhile, the driver, a Wallachian peasant in loose white shirt, blue Turkish jacket and scarlet sash, stands up in his wagon firmly planted above the struggling horses with an iron grip upon the leaders' reins.

No. 299— WINTER DAY AT SCHEVENINGEN

Height, 55 inches; length, 71 inches

Morris J. Schuch

THE snowy shore bristles with the boats of the fishing fleet, drawn up in serried ranks, three deep, their sails and masts sprinkled with white rime. Near one that bears the mark "Scheving. 60," three men are grouped at the right of two carts. One of the latter, which has a blue backboard, is piled with tawny nets; the other shows brown nets above a backboard which is red. Two horses are standing, free of the carts, at the left. A party of women all in long cloaks and some in white caps, a red and a blue skirt showing among them, approaches the boats at the right of the foreground. The distant sea is a dark slaty-olive with a creamy bar at the horizon, above which are scudding clouds in a faint blue sky.

THE level stretch of cultivated land is shaded in the foreground, where grow some scanty bushes at the right and a few green and purple cabbages at the left. In the sunlight beyond, where the red soil is patched with green, two women are kneeling at the right; one of them, dressed in a blue gown and white cap, stooping as if in the act of planting or sowing. Further back on the right two other women are similarly engaged, and in the distance, where the ground is again in shadow, figures are seen around a column of smoke. The level ends in a high bank which, bunched with foliage and sprinkled with trees, follows around the right to the front. Here a woman and child are walking along the top of the bank, above which appears a cottage roof and a red chimney.

A YOUNG woman, with her hair neatly parted beneath an olive-brown cap, sits at the right of a table, three-quarters turned to the spectator, diligently sewing. A greenish-gray tippet-shawl is worn over her silvery-rose waist and a greenish-blue apron covers her lap. With one hand on it a little fair-haired child stands in front of her mother, holding something which strongly reflects the light. A tawny-colored dog lies prone at the right, while at the left of the scene the baby is asleep in its cradle, over the hood of which hangs a bright green drapery. At the back of the group a young man leans his elbow on the table, as he lifts to his lip a white teacup.

ITALIAN WASHERWOMEN

Height, 72½ inches; width, 54 inches

FROM under the arch of a bridge in the middle distance a shallow brook curls in a reversed S to the front. Here in midstream a woman in white chemise and plum-red skirt stoops over the water, washing a piece of linen. Farther back another woman stands in the brook wringing a garment, held at the other end by a woman, who kneels on the bank beside another kneeling woman who is washing. Other figures, standing and stooping, appear in the rear near a footpath which winds down from the bridge. Here a girl with a basket on her head is descending, while other figures, similarly burdened, are seen crossing the bridge between the stems of the trees that grow from the brookside. On an eminence at the right of the background a villa lies among trees.

Poor Prices Paid for Art Works in the Collection of the Late
P. A. Schem.

Water colors from the collection of the late Peter A. Schemm, of Philadelphia, sold at the American Art Galleries last night for prices that were small by comparison with the fame of the names attached to them. There were eighty-eight offered. The total realized was $10,325. That is an average of about $140 a picture, and among those sold were some by such men as Bosboom, Bloomers, Willem Maris, De Bock, Mastenbroek and Israels.

The last, "Amusing the Baby," was the most favored picture of the evening, and sold to Knoedler & Co. for $1,390 after some spirited bidding that came to a lull when it was least expected. Willem Maris's "The Drinking Pool" went to N. A. Croben for $1,200. There were no other prices in four figures. Weissenbruch's "Unloading the Fishing Boats" was sold to C. # CLARK PAYS $2,650 FOR AN INNESS

Bidding at Sale of Schemm
Collection Is Not Animated,
Despite Good Canvases.

An American picture brought the top figure at the second session of the sale of the collection of the late Peter A. Schemm, last night, in Mendelssohn Hall. That was George Inness's "Late Afternoon," which ex-Senator W. A. Clark secured for $2,650.

The rest of the sale, which was conducted by Thomas Kirby, of the American Art Galleries, was never very animated. Just before the disposal of the Inness, Henner's "Red Drapery" became the property of Knoedler and Company, for $1,100, and Schreyer's "On the March Battery Going into Action," an unusual subject from this painter's brush, that of W. S. Kilmer, for $1,050.

A. A. Hickey, of the Brooklyn Museum, and John E. D. Trask, of the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, were among the purchasers. The latter gave $150 for W. Elmer Schofield's "Winter Landscape." The total realized on the seventy-three pictures offered was $25,875. That brings the total to date to $36,200.

70 PAINTINGS AT SALE BRING $46,290

Top Price at Schemm Auction
$7,000 for Schreyer's
"The Reconnoitre."

Seventy pictures offered at the third session of the Peter A. Schemm sale at Mendelssohn Hall, last night, brought $46,290. That sum brings the grand total up to date to $82,490. As at the preceding sessions, the prices were small, and in a number of instances notably so.

The top figure of the evening was $7,000, given by Martin Beck for Schreyer's "The Reconnoitre." That was started at $3,000, and bid up rapidly to the selling figure, where it stopped suddenly. Ridgway Knight's "Fetching Water" brought another good price of the evening going to M. C. Anderson for $1,000. Former Senator Clark secured for $2,800 Cazin's "A Normandy Village," which was one of the admired pictures of the collection.

Two Innesses, the "Snowy Weather" and "Approaching Storm," were passed by Mr. Kirby, of the American Art Galleries, the auctioneer, without explanation.

Two Paintings Withdrawn.

"The two paintings catalogue Nos. 204 and 214 of the collection, which were withdrawn last evening, were exhibited in our galleries during the opening and press day of the exhibition. Friday, March 10, and were favorably commented upon by those who viewed them. Toward evening of the opening day George Inness, Jr., who was visiting the exhibition, informed me of his doubts as to these two paintings, Nos. 204 and 214, being by his father.

"Accepting Mr. Inness's opinion, I immediately withdrew the paintings from the exhibition and ultimately from the sale, and in furtherance of our efforts to prevent the pictures passing into the hands of other parties, I have suggested to the executors of Mr. Schemm that they obtain the consent of his heirs to destroy the two pictures."

There were many speculations made as to the dealer or person who sold these pictures to Mr. Schemm.

Another American picture, J. Francis Murphy's "Indian Summer," went to the Knoedlers for $1,325, and still another, Wyant's "Autumn Landscape and Pool," to O. Bernet, as agent, for $2,100.

May Be for Union League.

Some time after these had been disposed of, A. J. Conant's "Portrait of Abraham Lincoln" was sold to Thomas Benton for $3,700. It was whispered that the purchaser had acted as agent for the Union League Club, and that the picture is to be hung in the club rooms. When this picture was offered, Mr. Kirby announced that the painter of the portrait, who is ninety years of age, and executed it in 1860, came to the gallery to view it, and said it was, at the time, considered a faithful likeness of the martyred President.

Mr. Kirby backed that statement by announcing that on the Fourth of July, 1861, he had seen President Lincoln raise the flag over Independence Hall in Philadelphia, and that he was certain of the accuracy of the likeness. That statement produced a storm of applause and a storm of bids.

Other good prices during the evening were realized on Cazin's "A Mill in Flanders," which went to W. W. Seaman, an agent, for $4,500; Lenbach's "Mother and Child," to Mrs. Frederick F. Thompson for $3,200; Israel's "Watching and Waiting," to O. Bernet for $4,500; Rico's "Santa Maria della Salute," to W. L. Austin for $5,600, and Harpignies's "Summer," which went to Martin Beck for $5,100.

KIRBY WITHDRAWS 2 INNES PICTURES

Son of Painter Questions the Authenticity of Paintings in Schemm Collection.

Sixty-seven pictures sold at the last session of the Peter A. Schemm sale in Mendelssohn Hall last night for $102,800, thus bringing the grand total to $185,395. Thomas E. Kirby, of the American Art Galleries, conducted the sale.

It was full of surprises. It was animated, and its prices were at times remarkably high. The highest was $8,200, and given by W. Sharpe Kilmer for Schreyer's "The Wallachian Teamster—Entangled in the Marshes," which had been advertised before the sale as this painter's masterpiece. That price as compared to those that have been given for Schreyer's canvases heretofore in this country, must be considered small.

Next to the price given for that picture in importance was the announcement made by Mr. Kirby regarding Inness's "Approaching Storm" and "Showery Weather," as follows:

33 WATER COLORS GO CHEAPLY

Schemm Collection Brings $10,325—
Highest Price $1,300.

The sale of the Peter A. Schemm collection of paintings was begun in the American Art Galleries last night, when the eighty-eight watercolors were sold for a total of $10,325, or an average of $140. This was an astonishingly small amount, considering how "fashionable" the modern Dutch painters are nowadays. The individual prices ranging from $1,300 to $20. Knoedler & Co. gave $1,300 for Josef Israels's "Amusing the Baby." The next highest price obtained was $1,200, given by N. A. Groben for Willem Maris's "The Drinking Pool." Weissbruch's "Unloading the Fishing Boats" went to C. Fliermans for $550, a Poggenbeck to Knoedler & Co. for $410, and a Blommers to Fliermans for $175. One of the curious features of the sale was the low prices obtained for such pictures as Kaemmerer's "The Morning Walk," that brought only $40; Bosboom's "Street Scene," that sold for $30; a Clays, that went for $35; a Kever for $30, and several Mastenbroecks, that brought from $45 to $30. A Neuhuys went for only $130, and a "Winter Landscape," by Leonard Ochtman, topped all of these foreigners with $275 as its price. The sale of the canvases begins to-night in Mendelssohn Hall.

$7,000 FOR SCHREYER CANVAS

The third session of the sale of the Schemm collection of paintings in Mendelssohn Hall last night was marked by slightly higher prices and by the withdrawal of two canvases attributed to Inness, the "Showery Weather" and "Approaching Storm," no official explanation being made for the "passing" of the pictures. The highest price of the night was $7,000 paid by Martin Beck for Schreyer's "The Reconnaitre."

W. A. Clark who was in the audience, paid $425 for J. Francis Murphy's "On the Lowlands," and $250 for Cazin's "A Normandy Village." A. A. Healy bought Mesdag's "Start of the Fishing Fleet" for $550, and George A. Hearn paid $250 for W. L. Lathrop's "The Meadows."

Among the other high prices were $610 paid by E. Maguire for De Haas's "Cattle in Holland," $1,000 by M. C. Anderson for Ridgway Knight's "Fetiching Water," $925 by M. C. Migel for Verboeckhoven's "Landscape and Sheep," $975 by W. L. Austin for Gerome's "Prayer Mosque of Caid-Bey," $2,000 by Knoedler & Co. for Madame Dieler's "A Corner of the Pasture," $3,800 by the same firm for Israels's "Neighborhood Call," $2,000 by R. H. Laurens for Roybet's "A Spanish Nobleman," $900 by Mrs. E. A. Kopf for Knight's "Mussel Gatherer," $1,550 by Knoedler & Co. for Henner's "Ideal Head," and $775 by the Knoedlers for Harpignie's "On the Mediterranean," and $900 by George D. Horst for Vibert's "Visit to Figaro." The total was $46,290.

When the "Portrait of Abraham Lincoln" by A. J. Conant was placed on the easel Kirby stopped the sale long enough to tell the large audience that a few days ago the artist, Conant, who is 94 years old, came into the American Art Galleries and told the speaker of his experiences in painting the portrait of the slain President and of what a good likeness it was. The auctioneer said he could testify it was a good likeness, for he had seen President Lincoln hold a flag over Independence Hall on the morning of July 4, 1861, a year after the portrait was painted.

Kirby also added, as a touch of humor to a Lincoln story, the President neither patted his head nor shook him by the hand. The end of his speech was greeted by applause and bids from all over the house until the figure of $3,700 was reached, an extraordinary price for a canvas of this character. It was purchased by a buyer who uses the name of Thomas Benton. It is expected the portrait will become one of the permanent treasures of the Union League.

In addition to this interlude of oratory there was much greater excitement among the buyers in the hall than at any time at any sale this season, and some of the prices that resulted from this agitation were as erratic as the March winds. For example, a Martin Rice "Santa Maria Della Salute" was bought by W. L. Austin for $5,600, and a Harpignies went to Martin Beck for $5,100. A splendid Blommers brought only $2,550 and a Cazin brought $4,500. The average of the prices was so high $102,800 was obtained for the same number of paintings that averaged less than half that amount on the two preceding nights.

Among the best prices for the night were: Eight thousand two hundred dollars, paid by W. Sharpe Kilmer of Rochester, for Schreyer's "A Wallachian Teamster"; $3,000 by W. W. Fuller for De Bock's "Truck Farming," $2,700 by W. W. Fuller for Jacques's "The Farmyard," $4,650 by an agent for Israels's "Watching and Waiting," $3,900 by James Elverson, Jr., for Ziem's "Fete Day," $2,800 by M. C. Anderson for Bouguereau's "The Veil," $3,000 by Knoedler & Co. for Neuyhuys's "The Morning Kiss," $2,450 by the Georges Petit Gallery of Paris for Boldini's "La Place Clichy," $3,200 by Mrs. F. F. Thompson for Lenbach's "Mother and Child," $2,500 for Inness's "Gathering Clouds," $3,500 by A. A. Healy for Israels's "Mother and Son" and $3,200 by Knoedler & Co. for Maers's "Dutch Landscape." The total for the whole sale was $185,805.

SCHEMM PICTURES SELL LOW

Eighty-eight Paintings Bring at Auction Only $25,875.

What may be set down as a Philadelphia scale of prices seems to have been established for the pictures collected by Peter A. Schemm of that city, which are being sold at auction by the American Art Association. The low prices that prevailed at the opening session were continued last night, when the first of the oil paintings were disposed of in Mendelssohn Hall. Eighty-eight paintings brought only $25,875.

As seldom happens when native works of art are pitted against the more fashionable foreigners, an American painting brought the highest amount. This was George Inness's "Late Afternoon," for which W. A. Clark gave $2,650. The next highest price to this was $1,100, paid by Knoedler & Co. for Henner's "Red Drapery," and close below this was Israels's "Resting," that went to C. Fliermans for $1,075, while W. S. Kolmer gave $1,060 for Schreyer's "On the March—Battery Going Into Action." John E. D. Trask of the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts bought W. ## LINCOLN PORTRAIT GOES FOR $3,700 IN SCHEMM SALE

Two Alleged Inness Works Are Withdrawn by Kirby.

W. J. Press 3-10-11
ARTIST'S SON QUESTIONED THEM

Unusually High Prices Bring Evening's Total to $102,009 and Sale to $185,000.

Persons who went to the final session of the sale of the Schemm collection of paintings in Mendelssohn Hall last night had the opportunity of enjoying more sensations than usually attend the dispersal of paintings at auction. The chief of these unusual happenings was the formal statement made by Thomas E. Kirby regarding the two canvases attributed to Inness that had been passed in the sale on Thursday night and the little speech he made regarding the Lincoln portrait that aroused an outburst of applause and bids. This is the American Art Association's formal statement regarding the Inness pictures made through the auctioneer:

"The two paintings, catalogue Nos. 204 and 214 of the Peter A. Schemm collection, which were withdrawn last evening, were exhibited in our galleries during the opening and press day of the exhibition, Friday, March 10, and were commented on favorably by those who viewed them. Toward evening of the opening day George Inness, Jr., who was visiting the exhibition, informed me of his doubts as to these two paintings, Nos. 204 and 214, being by his father. Accordingly Mr. Inness's opinion, I immediately withdrew the paintings from the exhibition and ultimately from the sale, and in furtherance of our efforts to prevent the pictures passing into the hands of other parties, I have suggested to the executors of Mr. Schemm that they obtain the consent of the heirs to destroy the two pictures."
